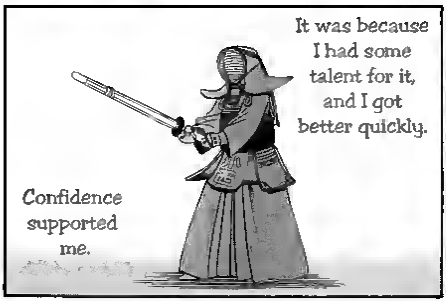
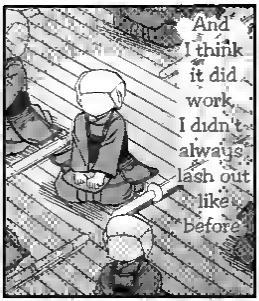
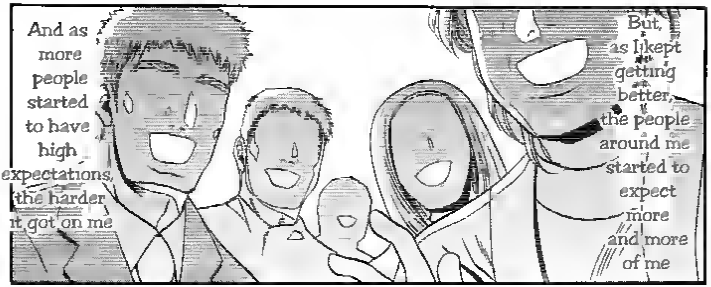
She was hoping they would discipline me a little there.
My grandmother was the one who took me to a kendo dojo.



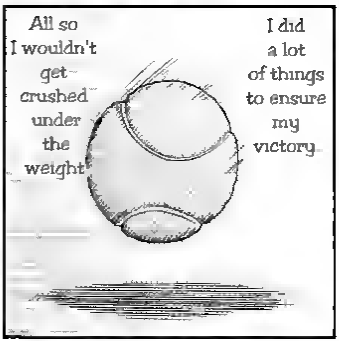
It was because I had some talent for it, and I got better quickly.
Confidence supported me.



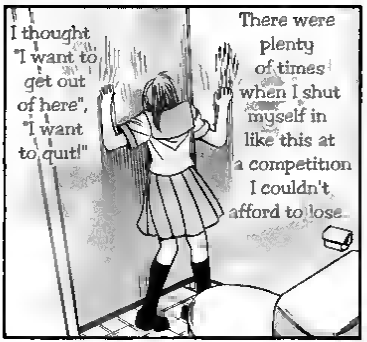
And I think it did work. I didn't always lash out like before.



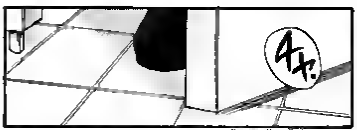
And as more people started to have high expectations, the harder it got on me
But, as I kept getting better, the people around me started to expect more and more of me



All so I wouldn't get crushed under the weight
I did a lot of things to ensure my victory



I thought "I want to get out of here", "I want to quit!"
There were plenty of times when I shut myself in like this at a competition I couldn't afford to lose



Ah.

I'm sorry,
I'll be right there.

Are you in here, Konishi-senpai?

If I have to experience something like that again,
I'm finished with all this.
I will get better.
Then losing and having everyone stop expecting the world from me is way better.

I'll get better and support myself.
There's no way in hell I'm quitting Kendo, so I'll just get better.
